Summary

The Pennsylvania Ballet records documents the activities of the Pennsylvania Ballet Company, active from 1963 through 2011. The materials in this collection cover the years 1963 to 2004, with the bulk of the materials dating from 1969 to 1990. The Pennsylvania Ballet is still an active organization, so this collection does not offer a complete picture of the company's history; the company has retained most of their records. The collection includes photographs of both dancers and productions, biographical information about dancers and company staff, choreography and lighting notes, information about tours, publicity materials, posters, and videos of performances. This collection includes preserved versions of the organization's website, available through Archive-It.

Note

The Pennsylvania Ballet Records are the physical property of the Special Collections Research Center, Temple University Libraries. Temple University holds literary rights only for material created by university employees and to material given to the university with such rights specifically assigned. For all other material, literary rights, including copyright, belong to the authors or their legal heirs and assigns. Researchers are responsible for determining the identity of rights holders and obtaining their permission for publication and for other purposes where stated.

In 1962, Barbara Weisberger, a protégé of George Balanchine, started the School of the Pennsylvania Ballet to train dancers for her forthcoming dance company. The "Philadelphia Ballet" was officially founded the following year, although a legal dispute with a school of a similar name led her to change the company's name to The Pennsylvania Ballet. George Balanchine served as artistic advisor and the Ford Foundation provided the funds to help the struggling company establish itself. The first performance was given on April 16, 1964 at the University of Pennsylvania's Irvine Auditorium, initiating over four decades of ballet in Philadelphia.
